THE KIND I LIKE.

I know some people will be, they're contented to be, their future seems a peaceful view through a window of their door. Yet the little people spend their strength through their eyes to see their own life ever full of pain.

I know another class full well, they're contented to be, with a decent home they dwell, they're contented to be, with a decent home they dwell, they're contented to be, with a decent home they dwell.

Still others in the lower walk, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be.

But there's another kind of folk, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be.

You give me friends with laughing tears, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be, they're contented to be.

One girl's summer. A sacrifice that brought its own Great Reward.

They made an attractive group as they sat in the station, waiting for the south-bound train. There was Mrs. Arnold, a stately, smiling matron of forty-five, whose mature charms lost nothing when contrasted with the youthful pretensions of her three slender, stylish daughters.

There Bob, who had just reached the age when, from being supremely indifferent as to the color of his gloves and the fit of his coat, he had come to regard these questions as paramount importance. And lastly, there was Edith, the household pet, who just now was flatteringly his own against the way down, eager to obtain a view of the train which was to carry them away from her home and her loved ones.

Mr. Arnold, who had been looking after the baggage, came into the room and clasped about him with the petting air, noticeable in the heads of old married men, his household and his family.

No Substitutes

For Royal Baking Powder. The "Royal" is shown by all tests, official, scientific, and practical, stronger, purer, and better in every way than all other Baking Powders. Its superiority is privately acknowledged by other manufacturers, and well known by all dealers.

If some grocers try to sell another baking powder in place of the "Royal," it is because of the greater profit. This of itself is good evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

LOOK with suspicion upon every attempt to palm off upon you any baking powder in place of the "Royal." There is no substitute for the "Royal."

she would be as entertaining as she knew how to be.

Before the meal was over Helen Arnold had made an interesting discovery, namely, that her father could be entertaining as well as herself.

Moreover, she had a certain agreeable novelty about being tête-à-tête with her own father at dinner. Helen could hardly remember when she had enjoyed an hour so much. When they came from the table Mr. Arnold glanced involuntarily at his daughter. "If you are not too tired, Helen," he said, "I wonder if I couldn't have some music."

"Indeed you may," answered Helen, trying to speak lightly, though the unconscious gleam in his eyes had told her of his real intention. "I'll be glad to play the piano for you."

When the long evening was over and Helen went to her father's side to bid him good night, he put his arms about her and held her fast. "This has been like old times, Helen," he said. "I had forgotten a long time ago that you were such a pleasant surprise. I shall think of it very often when I'm here alone. Thank you, my dear, good night."

Helen bowed him in silence, not trusting herself to make a reply. But as she went upstairs, struggling to keep back the tears, she whispered softly, "My poor, lonely father, I'll try after this to be a more cheerful daughter."

"You want to spend the summer at home," said Mrs. Arnold the next afternoon. She sat in her room at the seaside house, and looked at her oldest daughter, who was sitting on the bed, and her face was pale and her eyes were dim.

"Helen, you must be quiet, consider your health!"

Helen gazed at the reflection of her shadow in the mirror opposite and smiled a little. It hardly seemed necessary to answer that argument.

"Stay in the city all summer," chimed in Grace. "Why, Helen, nobody does."

"Papa does," answered Helen, quietly.

"You couldn't stand it, Helen," said Laura, the youngest daughter, positively. "You'd die of loneliness."

"But papa stays there without any of us," persisted Helen.

"How absurd! Indignantly. "How absurd you are, Helen. Of course papa stays there without any of us."

But Helen's mind was made up. Unmoved by remonstrances or ridicule, she packed her trunk and went back to the city, not to be admitted.

When she had left, her father, who had been waiting to receive her, it was some time before he could be made to understand the change in her plans, but when he at last comprehended her explanation he gave quite a sigh.

"Give up your summer's pleasure, Helen," he said. "I shall be glad to see you, but you must go back to-morrow."

But even then Helen proved obstinate. Not that the way of self-denial was unexpectedly easy, she had many days of loneliness, many gloomy hours; every letter she received from Grace made the course she had marked out for herself seem more difficult.

But the result was a new revelation between her father and herself, his grateful tenderness, the change in his face and step, his altered bearing, surely these were enough to recompense her for a greater sacrifice. And moreover, during the enforced quiet of these long months Helen was making certain surprising discoveries. Among the many "nobodies" who had not left their homes to be sacrificed, Helen was finding people of intelligence and culture, charming people, people whose names she had hitherto barely found time to remember half a dozen times during the busy year.

She felt the inspiration of these earnest lives. Helen wondered not a little at her previous blindness.

It was perhaps through the influence of these new friends that she found so many new and unexpected opportunities of helpfulness. Her narrow life seemed to have broadened out, her sympathies had widened. One brave act of self-denial had opened her eyes to the distresses of all the suffering world and had brought her into touch with all the loving, sacrificing helpers of humanity.

When Mr. Arnold came home in September she scanned her oldest daughter with some anxiety. "Do you think Helen is well?" she asked of Grace. "Doesn't she seem changed?"

"She does look well," Grace answered, doubtfully. "But she certainly seems different in some way."

mer, with its crooked and its straight, with its inspirations and its blessings, Helen Arnold from her heart thanked God—Helen Lummis, in Congregationalist.

Taking it easily. The ship of an admiral, who was the duke of Wellington's near connection, was wrecked. He was placed in command of a second ship, which was also lost and he himself was drowned.

Lord Charles communicated the disaster to his father, who merely exclaimed, with Spartan calmness and brevity: "That the second ship be lost."

The twin anecdote, so to call it, had reference to Lord Charles himself. Being ordered with his regiment abroad, he felt much concern at bidding farewell to his aged father, whom he might never see again. On his making the announcement, the duke, who had been reading, dashed his emotion. "No saying 'Good-bye,' 'Good-bye,' 'Good-bye,' and taking a last look before leaving the room, the son appeared to be intent on his reading as ever—forgetting to bid adieu."

Mr. Cottle—"I wonder why Miss Burr dresses in all colors of the rainbow," Mr. Cottle—"Probably because she knows she is the reigning belle."

Inter Ocean. "Keep quiet, my friend, and don't talk," said the highwayman to the passenger, who had just been told that the highwayman was the reigning belle."

THE GARDEN SLUG. A Little Pest That Is So Persistent as to Be a Curse to the Gardener.

There is a sort of slug which consumes a large family of mollusks without shells, but wears them inside and outside their bodies. It is a true parasite and they have each a single small hole, which is so far from being a disadvantage, that it is a great advantage.

One species, called the "testaceous," plentiful in Europe, is one of the most voracious of living creatures. It is a true parasite and they have each a single small hole, which is so far from being a disadvantage, that it is a great advantage.

When the testaceous, which seemed prey it glides softly forward it is so as not to cause alarm, and fastens its jaws upon an unprotected part of the worm. The latter has its body furnished with stiff bristles, so that the slug tries to get its life in between the rings. Then it simply holds on until the captive succumbs. Others are more subtle and are attached and gobbled by the predatory mollusk, which is mortal in its habits, salivary forth in the night on its marauds.

This curious animal frequents gardens, where the rich earth contains worms in plenty. It lives to be five or six years old. In winter it buries itself in the ground, where it remains until the spring, when it comes forth in a small scale. If they are taken out of the earth where they are laid and exposed to the air they burst into pieces like diminutive bombshells, the fragments flying for quite a distance.

Most species of slugs are vegetable feeders. In Europe they are very numerous and do great damage to vegetation, especially in England. The foreign varieties have all been imported to this country, but they seem to inflict no injury here—conditions, presumably, less favorable to their propagation. It is hardly necessary to say that they were not brought over by design. One word, which may have been fed out on wire hedges, has become a supply of food for the slug. It is called a length of four inches and is called "linum."

In Portugal for a long time slugs have been known to eat the "linum." It is quite as big and is very plentiful on the Pacific coast and especially in the state of Washington, where it has a disagreeable way of eating the linum. It is a smaller variety found all over the interior of this country. In the woods beneath the backs of trees and wherever it is damp. An imported slug that has been fairly common here, likewise of moderate size, is called the "linum argenteum." There are many other species in this part of the world, both native and exotic. Slugs are air-breathing animals. Their eyes, on stalks like a snail's, have sharp sight, and their gills are so arranged, that they can live in water.

The Tariff Plank.

"We denounce the McKinley tariff law enacted by the Fifty-first Congress as the culminating atrocity of class legislation, we denounce it as a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few. We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Republican party that the Federal Government has no constitutional power to enforce and collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue only, and demand that the collection of such duties shall be limited to the collection of the government, honestly and economically administered."

Welcome to you, Judge Graham.

Here's the right hand of fellowship, Judge Colley.

On the right side at last Gen. Mc-Veigh. Shake!

Senator Blackburn is filling his appointments in the Third district this week.

Both of the Presidential candidates will attend the World's Fair dedication at Chicago Oct. 21. Both of them have also accepted invitations to attend the same banquet in New York Oct. 13.

Christian county Democrats are wide-awake this year. They are aroused and determined to give their cousins an old-time fight. They will all be in shouting Capt. Ellis. Mc-Veigh will roll up a big majority for Judge Grace and they will see that Matt Major is the next Sheriff of the county.

The tide is set toward Cleveland and nothing can head it off by next month. Three Republican candidates of national reputation have this week renounced their former party and announced their intention to vote for Cleveland and Stevenson. They are Judge Walter G. Graham, of Indiana, Ex-Attorney General Wayne
McVeigh, of Pennsylvania, and Judge Thos. M. Cook, of Michigan. Gen.
McVeigh has written a lengthy letter setting forth his reasons for abandoning the Republican party.

Of course there were a few obstinate, cranky and careless Democrats who failed to register, but the registration shows that the outcome of the election is a foregone conclusion. The majority of 200 is cut down by the returns to only 89. The Republicans also registered closely and the result is a disappointment to them. About 40 Democrats were sick or absent and will be entitled to register in the Court's office on Oct. 31, Nov. 1 or Nov. 2. Unless frauds are perpetrated the Republicans cannot muster man for man with the Democrats, as all of the revenue crowd, including the Federal themselves, are registered. The falling off of about 100 in the Republican vote of the city is due to the emigration that has been going on and probably to the fact that colored colonists are needed this year in Indiana. At any rate there are fewer Republicans here than there were a year ago and more Democrats.

The party majorities the Republicans have made up largely of doubtful floaters and will not be kept in line in the face of the certain defeat that awaits their local ticket.

The Kutawa Convention.

The district convention of the fourth judicial district was held at Kutawa, Ky., Wednesday, Oct. 5, with all the counties represented.

Judge Peters, of Callaway, was made chairman of the convention.

There was no opposition to either Judge Grace or Mr. Garnett and they were nominated by acclamation to their present positions by acclamation.
Entire harmony and good feeling prevailed.

Christian county was represented by Messrs. Hunter Wood, F. W. Dabney, John Phelps, W. M. West, S. S.
Buckner, J. E. Claiborne and one or two others whose names we could not obtain.

THERE STOOD GEORGIA

Gen. J. B. Weaver, third party candidate for President, accompanied by his wife and Mrs. Leann, reached the city on the 10 o'clock train yesterday.
He was met at the train by Esq. M.
D. Davis, Mr. E. L. Foulkes, Esq.
Geo. N. Johnson, Esq. Josiah Gray and other leaders of the third party.
There was no enthusiasm whatever and the crowd at the depot was but little larger than usual upon such occasions. Gen. Weaver removed his hat as he passed through the line of loyal bystanders on the platform.
He is rather a smaller man physically than the people expected to see, being far from distinguished looking to the casual observer. He is evidently getting old, his hair and mustache being quite gray. Mr. Pettit, in whose interest the visit to this district is made, arrived from Owensboro with his children, but was not at the depot with the reception committee.
Arrangements were made to have the speaking in the open air, in front of the court house but the crowd was so small that the meeting was held inside the court house, the flow of oratory was at its height when we went to yesterday afternoon and no attempt can be made in this issue to tell what was said. Of course the speeches made by Gen. Weaver, Mr.
Leann and Mr. Pettit were not in substance efforts that have been made elsewhere and which have appeared in print from time to time. The appointed speaker, the speaker numbered about 600, but made up largely of Democrats and Republicans, as the third party is very weak numerically in this county.

bined Opposition.

cratic Ticket.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 6.—Returns from all the counties of the State make the majority 70,177. It is probable that the official vote will change this a few hundred.

It is a great Democratic victory and means that the South is still solid Northern's majority in Tom Watson's district is 1,000.

It is a sweeping victory for Democracy. The vote has been unusually heavy everywhere except in Atlanta.
There was no opposition whatever here, hence a large amount of apathy which prevented anything like enthusiasm. So far not a single county outside of the Tenth district has been carried by the third party, though it is probable some counties in the Ninth and some in the Seventh will do that way.

It has been a custom for years for all the ladies to attend Mr. M. E.
Rodgers' millinery openings, as they feel sure of having seen all the latest styles and shapes in such goods. Evidently his display has been viewed. This season has been no exception to the rule and her rooms were crowded both before and after the opening. Mr.
Rodgers' judgment in the selection of such goods has been tried, and she never fails to please anyone. Her stock this season embraces all the novelties and is a beauty to behold. If there is a lady who failed to look upon her gorgeous display she should waste no time in giving Mrs. Rodgers a call.

MR. ALLEN'S INSPECTION.

Miss Ida Allen's display of fine
millinery goods attracted large crowds of ladies both days of her opening and they were highly pleased with the display. Miss Allen was quite sick Tuesday, and at one time deemed it postponed the event, but with her usual courage she braced the storm, and with the assistance of Misses Kouss Cy, Overhiser and Gorham, made a most creditable display of fine pattern hats, bonnets and other millinery goods. Her stock is now complete and no lady should buy until her stock has been inspected.

MR. LAYNE'S ELEGANT LINE.

According to announcement Mrs.
Ada C. Layne held her Fall opening of millinery goods in her new apartment (Meier old stand) Wednesday and Thursday of this week. To say that her display is seldom excelled is putting it very mildly. Both days her display was very much patronized from far and near—all wanting to get a look at the royal display of fine hats, bonnets, French novelties, etc., except to find that the royal display weeks in the east studying the style and familiarizing herself with these goods and come back with a large and carefully selected stock which has been viewed by many hundreds of ladies. All have been outspoken in their praises and realize that they have enjoyed quite a treat in being afforded an opportunity to gaze upon such a rare collection of seasonable goods.

Another request was made yesterday for a division of time for Dr.
Clardy with either Gen. Weaver or Mr. Pettit, but the proposition was indignantly rejected and the information given that the candidates would divide time with nobody excepting Grover Cleveland or W. T. Ellis.
This decision was of course accepted and the candidates will divide time with the third party crowd had things all their own way.

Tuesday's Registration.

The figures of last Tuesday's registration shows that 81 per cent. of the vote of the city was registered. Of this vote the Democrats got out 88 per cent. and the Republicans 79 per cent. of the votes of their respective parties. These results are arrived at by assigning to the party which registered to vote with the doubtful voters who declined to state what party they would affiliate with. The figures are given by districts.

ANALYSIS OF THE VOTE.

An analysis of this vote is very encouraging to the Democrats. There are in the city 1241 votes, as shown by the last city assessment. Of these 701 are white and 640 colored. With a few exceptions all of the colored votes and about 140 of the white votes have been considered Republican, giving a Republican majority of 200 in the city. The Republicans confidently claimed that they would register 150 majority, but they have succeeded in getting a lead of only 89 and cannot hope to do much better in the supplemental registrations.
According to the registration books the vote as to color is recorded as follows:

MILLINERY OPENINGS.

Three Establishments Display their Fine Fabrics and Hundreds of Ladies Attend.

This week has been a busy one with the milliners of the city and three establishments had their opening Wednesday and yesterday.

MR. RODGERS' OPENING.

It has been a custom for years for all the ladies to attend Mr. M. E.
Rodgers' millinery openings, as they
feel sure of having seen all the latest styles and shapes in such goods. Evidently
his display has been viewed. This season has been no exception to the
rule and her rooms were crowded both
before and after the opening. Mr.
Rodgers' judgment in the selection of
such goods has been tried, and she never fails to please anyone. Her stock
this season embraces all the novelties
and is a beauty to behold. If there is a lady who failed to look upon her
gorgeous display she should waste no
time in giving Mrs. Rodgers a call.

MR. ALLEN'S INSPECTION.

Miss Ida Allen's display of fine
millinery goods attracted large crowds
of ladies both days of her opening
and they were highly pleased with the display. Miss Allen was quite sick Tuesday, and at one time deemed it
postponed the event, but with her usual
courage she braced the storm, and
with the assistance of Misses Kouss
Cy, Overhiser and Gorham, made a

A wife and several children are left. The interment took place at Hope cemetery Wednesday afternoon.

Deceased had been in the employ of the New York World for some months prior to his death. The remains will be brought to this city for interment.

The Old Deistrick Shale, for the benefit of the Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home, of Nashville, Tenn., will be presented at the Opera House in this city this evening. The play is said to be strictly original, and the most successful amateur play ever presented to the public. Fifty "shales" that are unrequited in the roles, selected from the best talent of the Tennessee and other states, will participate. How the "shale" was taught fifty years ago will be brought back to mind by the Company. This is said to be a very rich production and should not be missed. The play is one of great merit and besides it is given to help a noble cause—the completion of the Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home at Nashville—and deserves a liberal patronage. The company will come to the city by special train arriving at 5:30 p. m. Admission will be 50 cents. No charge for reserved seats. Tickets are now on sale and should be purchased at once as the indications are that there will be a packed house.

Tony Strube, a butcher in the employ of M. G. Girard, split his thumb with a saw one day this week and will never be able to use it again. If it is saved at all it will always be stiff.

Special attention is called to the conspicuous advertisement of B. Ross, of Louisville, which appears on the fourth page of this issue. Some weeks ago it was rumored that Mr. Rosenbaum intended leaving the city. This is a ridiculous story and he is still in the city in his announcement to the public. His stock of dry goods, clothing, notions, boots, shoes, etc., is larger than ever before and such a thing as an undershirt driving is not in the line. Bargain hunters should call early and inspect his large stock.

Hunting's circus came in on time and gave two very creditable performances Tuesday and Wednesday.

The circus was in the city for the first season with the farmers, and the limited advertising, the crowds were small at both performances. The circus showed some strange and there were some daring feats performed. All who attended were highly pleased. Owing to a confusion of dates Mr. Hunting, the proprietor and head clown, was not on hand, but his substitute filled the program in a very creditable manner. They went from here to Louisville.

Barlow Bros. will long remember with pleasure their visit to this city Tuesday night. The circus helped to draw a crowd for them and there never has been such a crowd in the Opera House as greeted them when the curtain rose. There were nearly 1,000 tickets sold and fully 100 people were turned away, being unable to secure even standing room.

The side aisles were all packed with people who stood up during the entire performance and all of the space in the rear of the seats was occupied in the same way. It was a house that tickled the manager all over and he has not yet quit smiling. It was a lot of fun to put the seats at $1.00 apiece.

The reduction in size to-day is due to an unexplained delay in the arrival of a shipment of paper that has been on the road since Sept. 15. Another delay in the city of our regular size, we are compelled to reduce to a half cent extra paper or suspend altogether for this issue.

We regret the necessity of reducing, as several columns of advertisements and reading matter are left out. We hope, however, it will be for only one issue.

THE COMING FAIR.

Extensive Preparations Being Made and the Outlook Quite Favorable.

On next Wednesday Oct. 12, our Fair commences and will continue throughout the week. Catalogues have been distributed over this and adjoining counties, and the occasion of the great meeting has been thoroughly advertised. Hundreds of letters of inquiry concerning the amount of premiums offered, space for stock, etc., have been received by the Secretary, and all correspondence has been promptly answered. The fact of such a number of inquiries having been made shows that much interest is being manifested, and in every case the replies, backed up by facts, have been of the nature to attract the owner of fine stock, and many have signified their intention to enter their stock in competition for premiums.

County Fairs, where property conducted, add much to the prosperity of the county and its people. Farmers are brought face to face with their fellow farmers, and the desire to excel is made truly visible when their products are displayed in competition. Then again the social features of such occasions should not go unmentioned. Clubbings are held, and social converse and their families join in the justification, making the occasion production of happiness long to be remembered.

The display of farm products, agricultural implements and fine stock this year promises to eclipse any former year of the kind in this county for years to come. In the speed races some very fine stock will appear, and the horse race program is offered. And just here we will state that the premium list will foot up several thousand dollars.

Large crowds are expected each day and should the weather be propitious the management will not be disappointed. An excellent brass band has been engaged to furnish music at short intervals and those who are fortunate enough to attend this grand meeting may rest assured of being entertained in a manner creditable to the Association as well as to themselves.

Before applying elsewhere for money to be sure to investigate the Hopkinsville Building & Loan Association. This is one of the oldest Associations in the State and has been in successful operation for 12 years.
